Bills target Lake Erie mussels

By Lee Bowman

The Pittsburgh Press

WASHINGTON — A prolific breed of mussel from Eastern Europe is causing environmental havoc in the Great Lakes, prompting a group of lawmakers to propose a $40 million counterattack.

To meet the threat of inch-long mussels known as zebra mussels for the stripes on their shells, Pennsylvania Republican Sens. John Heinz and Arlen Specter, and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, yesterday introduced legislation that would set up a $4 million program to combat the mussels.

The legislation introduced yesterday would set up programs to conduct research on the mussels, their effects on the lakes, and their possible spread to the Great Lakes basin.

Bills target Lake Erie mussels

WASHINGTON — A prolific breed of mussels from Eastern Europe is causing environmental havoc in the Great Lakes, prompting a group of lawmakers to propose a plan to combat the threat.

The bills would fund research and education efforts to find ways to control and eradicate the mussels. It also calls on the U.S. Coast Guard to regulate ballast-water dumping by ships plying the Great Lakes, a major tool in the spread of the mussels.

The issue is one that has surfaced throughout Lake Erie states throughout the years, and more are turning up in Lake Ontario, Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River.

Biologists believe the mussels, native to freshwater sites in northern Russia, got into the Great Lakes in the summer of 1986 after a European freighter mixed ballast water from Lake St. Clair, one of the Great Lakes, in the Mississippi River.

With virtually no natural enemies in their new home, and with a single female able to produce 60,000 eggs a year, the mussels are crowding out other aquatic life and clogging water intakes pipes on Lake Erie.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates the mussels could cost the commercial and sport fishing industries on Lake Erie, which lost millions of dollars during the record-breaking year, an estimated $1 billion.

The legislation introduced yesterday would set up pilot projects to help the federal government combat the mussels and other aquatic nuisances. The bill also calls for cooperation with Canada in addressing the problem.

Biologists say zebra mussels are likely to spread throughout the nation’s waterways. Because the mussels can survive out of water for up to two weeks, a small boat or mussel seed could become attached to the hull of another boat and carry it to other waterways.

The experts tell Pittsburgh officials to expect to see them within a few years. "It’s a concern," said Dr. Robert A. Ross, the director of the Water Quality Institute. "We can’t be complacent."
